

Farmhouse Transformed

Remodel/Addition

With a growing family and desire to preserve the original form of the home, this addition and complete renovation creates an open and casual living space more suitable to the homeowner's needs. With lot and form restrictions, the bulk of the addition takes place in the back of the home. The expanded kitchen opens up to an informal eat-in and seating area that features a masonry fireplace. The circulation throughout the home was reworked with a new master suite and family room that provides ample living space. A completely renovated lower level gives the home even more functionality.

The exterior of the house has been updated with a cleaner, more modern aesthetic to complement the interior. A wrap around back porch and covered porch off the front creates a connection to the outdoors. While all of the mature vegetation was conserved, the new landscaping ties the house to the site. The architectural details found on this house were carefully designed to provide a seamless fit into the surrounding neighborhood.
